Steve Barry has dedicated over 20 years to community banking, specializing in aiding small to medium-sized businesses and non-profits. With a Business Administration degree from St. Norbert College and honors from the Graduate School of Banking at UW-Madison, Steve's expertise spans commercial real estate, SBA financing, and mergers & acquisitions.

He spent nearly a decade at Waukesha State Bank before joining FNB – Fox Valley, later acquired by Nicolet, where he served as VP of Commercial Banking for 11 years. Steve's approach combines financial acumen with a passion for fostering relationships. He believes in connecting people with the resources they need and is seen as a trusted advisor by clients by assisting in problem-solving, or guiding succession planning. Steve's dedication to community banking goes beyond financial expertise; it reflects a passion for building meaningful connections and empowering businesses to thrive within their communities.

Steve's advice for new clients:

“Competitive rates and terms matter, but your relationship with your banker and bank often holds greater importance. In a community bank, we understand you and your business personally, allowing for quick, local decision-making. This speed of responsiveness and local control offers real value and comfort for a business owner.”

In his free time, Steve cherishes moments with his wife and two active daughters. Sports play a significant role in their lives, with Steve enthusiastically cheering on his kids during their events. His personal interests span golfing, running, and a deep appreciation for sports in general, finding joy in both active pursuits and family time.
